第一节（共 15 小题；每小题 2 分，满分 30 分）

阅读下列短文，从每题所给的四个选项（A、B、C 和 D）中，选出最佳选项，并在答题卡上将该项涂黑。

A

My dearest son and daughter,

The story of New Jersey high school student Rachel Canning suing (起诉) her parents for child support and high school education inspired me to write you a little letter. Let me just put this out there: the only way I expect to see you in a court is as a lawyer or a judge.

There are two things about this case that seem to be disaster.

First, it's natural for parents and children to argue. I can guarantee that we will disagree. One or both of you will, at some point, scream at the top of your lungs the various ways you hate me. And I won't always like you, either. But I will always love you and do everything I can to keep your best interests as my focus, even when I'm so angry. We are family. That means we are as much a part of one another as the flesh, blood and bones in our body. And we all should think about it very deeply instead of breaking that bond.

Second, I'll be honest, no matter how far apart we are on your life choices, your father and I will most certainly pay everything we can for your higher education. But that doesn't mean you deserve it. To be clear, that is a privilege we happily extend (给予) to you—not a right you are born with. And you will have to work hard to earn that privilege. Growing up is hard work.

If I do my job properly as your mother—and you do yours as my children—you would sooner get a job or two, and find a way to make your dreams come true than go to trial over what you think you have the right to.

Love always,
Mom

21. The mother writes this letter because she wants her children to _____.

- A. guarantee anything
 - B. scream out their anger
 - C. break the family bond
 - D. forget their best interests
23. The mother thinks of parents' paying for their children's higher education as _____.
- A. a way in which children realize their dreams
 - B. a test of whether parents love their children
 - C. a privilege that children should earn
 - D. a right that parents are born with

Modern humans have a hard time controlling their desire to eat. Often you eat not because you are hungry, but because you are affected by many other things. How much you eat is strongly affected by how much those around you eat. People eating alone eat least. People eating with one other person eat 35 percent more than they do at home. People dining in a party of four eat 75 percent more. Eating with overweight friends? You'll eat more. Is your waitress overweight?

You'll eat more. Wide variety of food? You'll eat more.

Plates can decide how sweet dessert tastes. If people ate it off a paper plate, they'd say, "This is good." If they ate it off a fancy silver plate, they would say, "This is the greatest cake I've eaten in my entire life."

Your knowledge about what makes food good or bad also affects how much you eat. You tend to eat more when you think the food is good, and less when you think it is bad. So Grandma's cookies always taste better than other cookies. "Good food" even has a "health halo (光环) effect". If we're eating something healthy, we feel that everything in that meal is healthy. Due to this, people often believe that a cheese cake with a salad has fewer calories (卡路里) than the cheese cake alone. That's perhaps also why eating organic (有机的) food might turn you into an annoying guy. Your brain may use anything that makes you feel good about your own morality to excuse your immoral behaviour.

Food and hunger affect your judgment too. Hungry judges give more serious sentences. Kids who don't eat breakfast behave worse than kids who eat their breakfast. People who have low blood sugar are more likely than the average person to have trouble concentrating and controlling their unpleasant emotions.

28. What is mentioned as a cause of overeating?

- A. Suffering from great loneliness.
- B. Being served by a helpful waitress.
- C. Being treated to high quality food.
- D. Eating with many friends.

29. According to the passage, an annoying person may be one who _____.

- A. finds any excuse for eating more
- B. is crazy about the quality of plates
- C. competes with others in making cookies
- D. teaches people to stick to morality

30. According to the passage, people are more likely to make a bad judgment when _____.

- A. they don't feel hungry
- B. they aren't overweight
- C. they have low blood sugar
- D. they know little about food

31. What would be the best title for the passage?

- A. When Can't We Go on a Diet?
- B. Why Affects Eating?
- C. How to Make Good Food
- D. Where to Find Safe Food

D

Books are typically written first, then narrated (朗读) for audio (有声) books. Until now, Audible, the largest company of audio books, has begun asking well-known writers to create works specifically for audio, instead of inviting people to narrate already existing print books. It's a new chapter for the book industry.

Audible now has about 30 totally new audio works in production. And it turns out that audio books, which have long been regarded as less important than e-books, have actually been doing quite well. They are a $1,000,000,000 industry, with more than 35,000 titles published in 2013 alone.

What promotes that progress is not only an evolution of technology, but more importantly, the rise of the celebrity (名人) narrator. Narrators are key to the success of an audio book and these days, producers are signing on more and more celebrities. Celebrities' narration is like a private performance to customers, who get a feeling of closeness in listening to their voices. Many of the customers buy audio books based on the narrator. They will listen to anything a specific actor or actress reads.

That is why Audible is taking the risk of not producing print books at all but starting totally new audio works. There's another reason why the company is expecting its risk-taking action to pay off: humans have been telling stories since the beginning of time. We are taking part in a little habit that goes back thousands and thousands of years—before the first mark was ever made on a stone. Long before writing, people were telling each other stories and the audio book goes all the way back to that tradition. As Peter Allen sang softly in the 1970s, everything old is new again.

32. The “new chapter” (Para. 1) refers to a time of _____.
- A. producing totally new audio works
 - B. starting audio companies
 - C. narrating print books for audio
 - D. creating electronic books
33. What does Paragraph 2 tell about audio books?
- A. Their difference from e-books.
 - B. Their previous production.
 - C. Their great importance.
 - D. Their bright future.
34. Customers like celebrities' narration because _____.
- A. celebrities help them understand the stories
 - B. celebrities have more attractive voices
 - C. celebrities have better narrating skills
 - D. celebrities seem to be within their reach
35. Audible believes its risk-taking action will be rewarding because _____.
- A. the action agrees with the story-telling tradition
 - B. customers play an active role in the action
 - C. the company has spent a lot on the action
 - D. the action has lasted for a long time

第二节（共5小题；每小题2分，满分10分）

根据短文内容，从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

While it is impossible to live completely free of stress, it is possible to prevent stress as well as reduce its effect when it can't be avoided. The US Department of Health and Human Services offers the following suggestions for ways to deal with stress.

- Try physical activity.

When you are nervous, angry or upset, try releasing (释放) the pressure through exercise or physical activity. 36

- Take care of yourself.

You should make every effort to eat well and get enough rest. If you easily get angry and cannot sleep well enough, or if you're not eating properly, it will be more likely that you will fall into situations of stress. 37

- Make time for yourself.

38 Don't forget, play can be just as important as work. You need a break from your daily routine to just relax and have fun. Go window-shopping or work on a hobby. Allow yourself at least a half hour each day to do something you enjoy.

- 39

Stress can result from disorganization (杂乱无章) and a feeling that "there's so much to do, and not enough time." Trying to take care of everything at once can be too much for you and, as a result, you may not achieve anything. Instead, make a list of everything you have to do, then do one thing at a time. 40 Set out to do the most important tasks first.

- A. Bear in mind the most important task.
- B. Schedule time for both work and play.
- C. Check off each task as it is completed.
- D. Make a list of the things you need to do.
- E. For example, you could take your job as your hobby.
- F. If stress repeatedly keeps you from sleeping, you should consult a doctor.
- G. Running, walking, or playing tennis are just some of the activities you might try.
